Program Notes

"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts."

So said that immortal playwright, William Shakespeare. Here, in this permanent memory of your school life, we will attempt to show you how our own small world has become a vast stage on which each student, each teacher, each custodian plays his part in bringing to life the Master Playwright's script. Here you will find and remember those numerous and varied scenes, those familiar actors and actresses—the team that won that last big football game of the season, the chorus and its memorable Christmas programs, the Senior ball, the Mummers' Club play, the HOMER HIGHLIGHTS, and many, many more. Here, in pictures, is your big production, your hour of glory. Come with us now:

Our Producer

The producer of a show is a man with a vision. He sees a spark of life, a hope for future possibilities in an unknown play and he fans this spark into actual life. He encourages others to his belief so that they will supply the rest of the material backing for his vision. He then becomes involved in the drudgery of putting the show on the road—securing dates and contracts, and finding people who can enact his vision for the audience. All too often this man goes unsung despite his faith and responsibility, for so many people see only his less glamorous side. This is the side that fires unsatisfactory people and receives the headaches and complaints of all those under him.

Our producer and the one to whom this book is dedicated is one who has faith in our students, in their potentialities, and who draws out and encourages these traits. She is our school nurse, Miss Mary Devlin. We feel that too often her worth goes unsung because we are apt to think of her more menial tasks—bringing truants to school and encouraging would-be truants to remain, binding up cuts and bruises and caring for other illness. However, her task is so much greater than that. She it is who helps keep her troupe happy and comfortable by solving personal problems resulting from broken homes and physical handicaps. She encourages interested young people to continue in the field of nursing and, by doing so, helps to preserve in future generations that vital faith in humanity's ability to overcome difficulty.

Co-Playwrights

LOUIS J. WOLNER

JOSEPH F. HERNEY

Where would a production be without playwrights? Ours, in the persons of Mr. Wolner and Mr. Herney, are very integral parts of the show.

The real financiers of a production and the ones who put their faith and trust in the producer as well as everyone else connected with the play are the backers, our board of education.

Backers

A. Daily, W. Wright, H. Goddard, Mrs. G. Watson, R. Butler, president, M. Haake, L. Smith, C. Webster, G. Morenus.

Box Office

HELEN LEONARD
Secretary

During the actual run of the show, the harried secretaries in the box office are besieged from all directions with constant queries about time, tickets, seats, and any other minor or serious detail that must be answered. These positions are ably filled by our office staff.

SHIRLEY KNAPP
Clerk of the Board

Directors

A tremendous factor in the success or failure of a play is the directors. These patient souls prod, coax, cajole, drive, force the actors to do their best. They are the ones who see each player about any difficulty he has, who helps the actor to overcome obstacles, and give his best performance.

Jane Treat, Dolores S. Hewitt, William D. Baldwin, Josephine Allen, Ruth O'Neill, Helen Carty.

No play rehearsals would be complete without a cafeteria staff to keep ever-famished young actors satisfied. Many productions also require food as props for the play. This capacity is very well filled by our own cafeteria staff.

Curtains

The cleanup job necessary before and after a production is an enormous undertaking in itself, but we believe our competent staff of custodians is very capable of performing this task, as well as serving in our production as these very necessary curtain men.

When many productions go "on the road" before opening night on Broadway, transportation presents quite a problem. So it is with us, since many of our actors and actresses live at some distance from the "Theatre" and must be brought in by bus. This rigorous and sometimes monotonous job is capably handled by a large crew of bus drivers.

LEADS

Stage Manager
Assistant Stage Manager

To oversee the actors, the prop men, the set crew and all the details of actually running the show, it is necessary to have a stage manager. His task is one of great responsibility, perhaps even distasteful at times. We feel that our stage manager is exceptionally equal to the occasion. Mr. Baldwin has been our Senior homeroom teacher as well as our Senior class advisor. He it was who directed and helped to make so successful the Senior auction, the Senior ball, the Senior play, and who helped us on the road to Washington.

We also feel that his task has been made lighter by the valuable help of his assistant, Miss Hewitt. She has worked with him on all the productions such as the Christmas program, and the Mummers Club and Senior plays. She has also been the untiring advisor to the Odyssey staff, patiently hearing our problems and solving seemingly unsolvable difficulties.

Working with these two is the crew of committee chairmen, in this case, our class officers, student council representatives, and editor of the ODYSSEY. They are the ones who have been leading the other workers and the actors, assuming responsibility and bearing the trust of their fellow students.

Of course, no one is thought of so often in a play as the stars, the leading men and women. In our production these are ably represented by the Seniors, those members of the student body who seem to be doing everything at once and who are so often in the limelight.

The play takes place between September 1943, and June, 1956.

Act I Scene I

The curtain opens and we see twenty-three frightened children weeping while their mothers try to console them. Teachers are frantically trying to quiet the din. In the background we can hear the retorts from a bus back-firing and horns tooting. It is the first day of school, and Don Barry grudgingly comes on stage—he still dislikes having done so. Ruth Lindsay decides to move to a better (?) school and makes an exit in the middle of the scene. Finally, everyone accepts the fact that they have to go to school and settles down. As the curtain closes, we hear the bus leave.

Scene II

Once again the curtain opens and we hear buses, horns, and greetings. The cast has nine more actors. During a January night, 1945, the school burns. After the curtain closes, we see Ruth Lindsay has changed her mind and is joining the others in racing to the fire station to finish the first grade.

Scene III

The curtain opens and reveals new faces among the second graders. We are now in the Phillips Free Library. The curtains are pulled shut and then opened. Now we are up the street in the Town Hall as third graders. As the curtain closes, Carol Robinson and Charlie Randall exit.

Scene IV

The travelers open to find that the cast is divided between stage right (Town Hall) and stage left (in the back of what is now Greene's Studio.) Helen Covell goes off at the end of the scene, and the traveler is pulled shut.

Scene V

Several CCC buildings are the setting of the fifth grade as the curtains open. Carol Robinson returns to our cast. The curtains close and open—the same setting—sitxh grade. This year the weird sounds of music carry us on stage as we are now allowed in band. Carol Robinson and Roger Hughston take leave as the curtain closes.

Program Notes

We have shown the duties of the well known personnel—the writers, producer, director, etc.—but there are people who make a show possible that are seldom recognized. These are our behind-the-scenes workers.

First comes the work of the press agents who release tantalizing news of a coming play to the public and create a demand for its appearance. Then we have the program coordinators who carry out the orders of director and producer in planning and meeting organizations. There are the budget controllers who handle all the money needed for the play, who spend it and keep track of all expenses. In our modern theater, scenery has become very important so that a staff is needed solely for the purpose of planning each set, each piece of scenery. Then it is up to the set builders and painters to bring these plans to life for the stage. However, while this is going on, don't forget the publishers, second in importance to the actual playwrights, who make the play available to our cast. Once the play is decided upon, there is a mad search for all sorts of props which may be anything from a bowl of nuts to an ivy trellis. There must be strong fellows to locate and bring in all these items. Often a play will call for a certain accent or perhaps even lines in a foreign language. Thus it is necessary to have on hand some speech consultants. Soon it is time for costumes. Competent girls are necessary for measuring, then sewing and keeping in order the wardrobe for all the actors. Sound effects play a large part in many plays. An alert crew must be able to produce any sound from a train whistle to a doorbell at exactly the right moment. Sometimes special music is needed to create an effect or develop a scene. This music may have to be written by the musicians whose job it is to produce it. Along with the special music there may be a dance which will have to be composed and worked out by a choreography staff. Many times background music and an overture are needed to put the finishing touch to a play. You know there has to be illumination of the house and stage but do you also realize the need and effect of special lighting arrangements and spots? Backstage there arises a need for husky fellows, known as grips, to push around heavy scenery. The place for the actors to stay when not on stage is called the green room, and there must be some form of entertainment provided for them there. This is to give them something to do during long waits, to calm their nerves, and to keep them quiet. Once the show is well underway, there has to be a committee to gather all the necessary information and make the programs. On the nights of the performance there have to be people in charge of the house—to seat the audience and pass programs. At all exits, as well as backstage, men are needed as safety checks in case an emergency arises which might result in a stampede, and to act as bouncers for stage-door Johnnies and unruly members of the audience. On hand both during rehearsals and at the show, there must also be a first-aid crew to handle any casualties. When the show is over, everyone waits breathlessly for the morning paper bearing the comments of the critics.

Because of their size and importance we have left until last the largest section. These people represent the carpenters for a play, and, in our life's script, the builders of mind and body. They develop strength and determination as well as sound, healthy bodies. Although builders are usually thought of as men, our future depends greatly on the strong but softening influence of women as well.

Act II Scene I

The cast is in the old part of the new grade school. Seventh grade is a real treat—this year we start the thrill of passing classes! By this time there are several new faces and lots of noise in the halls. We sadly wave good-by to Shirley Cole as the travelers close.

Scene II

We are in the new part of the elementary school when the curtain opens—but we later move to the lower floor of the brand new high school and get our own rooms. The greatest number of new faces appears since kindergarten. The curtain closes as the happy students leave for their buses.

(INTERMISSION)

Act III Scene I

Curtain—same building—upper floor—ninth grade. Shirley Cole returns to stay as Gloria Clark leaves. In the middle of the scene, Gloria returns and Rita Riley exits. Everyone has a wonderful time getting ready for the "Freshman Hop." Curtain.

Scene II

Curtain—same place—tenth grade. Everyone joins in making the gym ready for the dance, "March Melody." Traveler closes.

Scene III

Curtain—eleventh grade. We see again the familiar face of Helen Covell who joins in to help with the junior prom, "Knight Time." This is also the year of our famous spaghetti supper. Curtain.

Scene IV

Curtain—same place—twelfth grade. The cast is now complete and everyone aids to earn money for the trip to Washington, D. C. This is the year we sponsor the Senior Auction and Party, senior ball, and the senior play. The curtain closes upon us all as we sadly and joyously wave good-by and take our leave of school. Yet in our hearts we know we will return!

CHAMPS

Homer Central School's basketball team has progressed steadily in the last twenty-seven years under the guidance of Prof. George Butts. Over the years we have won 305 and lost 209 games. In 1933, our Class "B" team lost in the section IV finals. In 1947 we placed fourth in Section IV open tournament play. The year 1955 found us beaten by Binghamton Central to be runner-up in Class "A," section IV. Finally in 1956, our Class "B" team won overall championship over Binghamton Central's class "A" team. All in all, Homer has been twelve times the winner in the County League, and six times the winner in the League playoffs.

George appeared in Homer in the fall of 1929 to begin his teaching career after he had graduated from Cortland Normal School in June of the same year. For twenty-six years he has served as physical education instructor in Homer Central School and for the past six years director of athletics as well. His coaching assignments have included football, basketball, soccer, baseball, and track. At the present time he coaches soccer, J. V. and Varsity basketball, baseball, and directs the athletic program. For the past twelve years, he has been treasurer of Section IV of the New York State Public High School Athletic Association and has served on many important committees. In the Cortland County Athletic League he has been elected secretary-treasurer for twelve consecutive years. The unusual success of the league and the broad athletic program are a tribute to his organizational skill and deep interest in boys and girls.

During the years Homer Central School athletic teams have gained a reputation for gentlemanly conduct, excellent team spirit, firm will to win and loyalty, that can be attributed to Mr. Butts' ability and influence on the boys he coaches. Fellow coaches have the same high regard for his contribution to athletics.

The record bears out his success to develop winning teams. You need only to check the basketball page in the yearbook for the information.

Moments of triumph are especially sweet in an actor's hectic life. Our male stars, the basketball team, found this out in their dramatic win over favored Binghamton Central at Barton Hall to place first in the state sectionals. There were several nerve-wracking instances when our boys had to struggle to close the gap between the scores. Finally, though, with a wild burst of cheering from the bleachers, Durkee and Hubbard dropped in the final four-point lead. There was no containing our cheering section then. The noise was deafening as the team thundered around Coach Butts and hoisted him to their shoulders. The beautiful trophies, the speeches of praise were anticlimactic after such a dramatic triumph for Homer Central's 1956 basketball team.
